Case Study on Cardiac Anatomy”... Explain your answer. Caleb's defect lies in the interventricular septum between the atrioventricular valves. So, the best place to hear it would be from the lower left sternal border to the right lower sternal border because this is the area that overlies the defect.

The dialogue format engages the reader and makes learning more interesting. I followed the notes to the teacher and inserted mini review lessons on the anatomy of the heart and circulatory system, which enhanced the students' understanding of the case. I used unlabelled diagrams, which we labelled together as a class.

Case Study Part 2. The case described in the case study is a cardiovascular case. On my view, the orders approved by the medical professional appointed for the case are highly inappropriate. It is important to consider that the reactions from the drugs taken by the patient are potential sources of the patient's complaints.
