This book (it's a free download from his website, though I bought the Kindle version from Amazon instead) is a good read - for people who work with the media, or people who consume it. Yes, it's full of "dur, I *know* that", but it also reminds you of things you knew but sometimes forget to do: just like some of the best books do.

Mediactive by Dan Gillmor - Goodreads

In 2004, Dan Gillmor wrote "We the Media", one of the first books to illuminate the role of "citizen journalists". "Mediactive" should be seen as a follow-on to "We the Media", not an update or sequel. It's split into three major sections: Media literacy, Media creation, and, for lack of a better term, "Other".

That language is on the cover of Mediactive, a book that is at the heart of this site. It reflects a philosophy that is simple, though difficult in practice:

that we all need to use , not merely consume, the media—and that being literate in a digital age includes being creators of media, too.

Mediactive . This site (and book) aims to help folks navigate the media flow that we're all facing in this new age. My goal is to help people become active and informed users of media, as consumers and as creators. We are in a media-saturated age, more so all the time, and we need to find ways to use media to our — and our society's ...
