Floor Trusses Select Trusses & Lumber. Floor trusses are able to span farther than dimensional lumber and even I-joists. This reduces the need for interior bearing and provides space for HVAC, plumbing, and electrical systems within the floor panels. Our custom designed floor truss systems reduce the amount of "bounce" that can be found in conventionally framed floor joist systems.

Rafter Boards: The boards creating the slope of the roof are wider than lumber used to build trusses - 2x8s, 2x10s and 2x12s are most common in rafters vs. 2x4s in trusses. Rafter boards are fastened to the ridge board at the peak and the top plate where they join the wall. In finished space, insulation is placed between the rafter boards and drywall or other material is fastened to the face ...
