Gus was badly hurt, between Roxann and the bikers he has sustained broken teeth, cracked ribs and other injuries. To ease his pain he found his best friend, Captain Morgan, and had a drink, or two, or three. At the start of a cold winter Gus is hurt and alone, again. This is how book 2 starts as we continue to follow Gus's will to survive.

So I had been eagerly awaiting this one for some time. I pre-purchased 'Safari: Mountain Man 2' on the strength of those first two. But unfortunately for Mountain Man 2 I had just finished listening to several other zombie books which were really very entertaining. The opposition for this one had certainly stepped up a notch or two.

Mountain Man drops you straight into Gus's world, a decent enough bloke that just happens to still be surviving, in relative comfort, two years after the dead have made a mess of civilisation. As a result this probably isn't the best book to choose if you haven't read a book of this genre before.

Hellifax by Keith C. Blackmore | Audiobook | Audible.com

2.5 stars This audiobook is an introduction to the Mountain Man series and it's still free on Audible. The plot is fast, tense, disturbing and perfect for a short horror story. The narrative and characters are just too raw and uncomfortable for me, I don't like reading about characters who shit or piss on themselves or to be confronted with the reality of lack of hygiene in such a blatant way.
